

Session Three

Make it Mean Something

Scenario C

There is a large elderly population in your community. Many of the elderly citizens have difficulty with tasks such as mowing the lawn, raking leaves, shoveling snow, and driving in bad weather conditions. Consequently, many homes and lawns appear neglected, and some of the elderly citizens are unable to make it to the grocery store, doctor's offices, and other important destinations. The local boy scout troop has decided that this is an issue they want to address. Help them to design a program that will allow them to address the issue, possibly collaborate with others in the community, and have a meaningful leadership experience for themselves.

Be prepared to address the following questions when you present your program to the group:

- Why was this experience created?
- Does it meet the needs and desires expressed by the youth group? How?
- What are the youth members in the group responsible for?
- What are the adult leaders in the group responsible for?
- Would you consider this a transactional leadership process or a transformational one? Why?
- Is this experience meeting a community need?
- Is this experience being done in partnership with another community organization or entity?
